GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS. Considerations that Might Induce the Pope to Leave the Italian Capital. ROME, Nov. 22.-The Osservatore Romano states that it is unable to either confirm or deny the report that the Pope is to leave Rome in the event of war. It thinks, however, that he would leave, though regretfully, if the Italian government further contracted the iron circle that confines him and deprives him of all freedom in respect to his acts and communications with the Catholic world, or if he had reason to consider that Rome was no longer a scoure residence, either from a material or a per onal stand-point.

The report that 200 Alsatian recrnits had attacked their military escort is officially denied. The only basis for the report was that slight excesses were committed by inebriated friends of the recruits at Altgirch and Illfurt.

It is now estimated that the London Times's share of expenses in the Parnell commission will reach at least £100,000. Mr. Parnell's expenses will not fall short of that figure. How he will meet them is puzzling, as only £2,300 has thus far been subscribed for the use of the Irish

The assignment, which was made to L. J. Noftzger, of North Manchester, grows out of a heavy loss by fire sustained three years ago, when the opera-house and several other structures belonging to Hamilton were burned. It is expected that as soon as the real-estate market improves the property can be disposed of, the debts paid, and a neat sum turned over to Mr. Hamilton. The indebtedness of Mr. Hamilton is almost wholly due home creditors, and is seeured by first mortgage on real estate.

Strike of Episcopal Church Acolytes. CHICAGO, Nov. 22 -The strike fever has at last reached the church, and the result is a a queer complication at the extremely ritualistic Episcopal Church of the Ascension. It transpires that the acolytes, who bear the prominent part in the service, formed a society which they named the Sanctuary Guild. Frank Phillips, the server, was its president. A member of this guild was Louis Carciotto. He was an Italian, dark, good looking and imperious. He was the dean of the guild and insisted on calling himself master of the ceremonies. Moreover, he assumed a sort of headship over the lads. During the service be would make gestures, bidding them do this and that, mortifying them in the presence of the congregation. So the alcolytes revolted, and with the aid of Mr. Barry, the lay reader, drew up a set of resolutions deposing Carciotto from the mastership of ceremonies. When Father Larrabee, the rector, heard of this proceeding he called Mr. Barry to account for aiding and abetting the boys in their mutiny, and deposed him from the position of lay reader. The boys thereupon fell into a transport of indignation and formulated an ultimatum to the effect that unless the rector should restore Mr. Barry to the lectern they would go on a strike and refuse to take part in the services. Father Larrabee declined to restore Mr. Barry to his position, and the result was that on Sunday last the services were shorn of much of their ritualistic character, owing to the absence of the crucifier, the thuritier, the servers and the other acolytes, and of the lay reader. Public opinion is divided. Mr. Larrabee is commended on the point of discipline, while the applytes are applauded for their

Gen. Palmer Withdraws from the G. A. R. SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 22.—General Palmer, the late Democratic candidate for Governor, has withdrawn from membership in the Grand Army of the Republic. His reason for this action is that from what he has seen during the campaign he believes that the organization is being used in the interest of the Republican party. In reply to an inquiry, to-night, about the matter, he said: "I am sorry for even this seeming intention of separating myself from any number of my old comrades in arms. From the beginning till the present year I have been enthusiastically hopeful for its good. I have been disappointed-that's all, and my post has very promptly and very honor-ably given me my withdrawal card."

Mrs. Doran Finishes the Story of Her Crime and the Jury then Retires.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal COLUMBUS, Nov. 22.-The concluding testimony of Mrs. Mary Doran in her own behalf occupied the attention of the court for some time this morning. Her story was substantially the same as has already been published in the Journal. She related, without the slightest indication of emotion, all the details leading to and concerning the horrible crime. She was rigidly cross-examined by the prosecution, but nothing new was developed in the case. After she had finished the arguments began. The State and defense were each allowed, by Judge Keyes, two hours in which to present their statements to the jury. The argument of Prosecutor Pearcifield was especially forcible and convincing. Judge Keyes delivered his charge, which was very impartial, to the jury about 4 o'clock, and they retired to come to a decision, but up to a late hour to-night they had returned no verdict. It is generally believed that the jury will disagree.

The Wager Was Worse Than He Expected.

New Castle Conrier. "Doc" Morrison's unbounded faith in the election of Cleveland led him to make a proposition to Conductor Brash, of the O., I. & W., that he (Morrison) would ride in the water closet on his next trip if Cleveland was not elected, and pay regular fare. If Grover did succeed himself, Morrison, was to ride in a palace car without annoyance from the ticket-puncher. A few days after the result of the election was known, Doc boarded the early east-bound train for a forty-five-mile trip, and it happened to be in charge of conductor Brash, who promptly esthe key on him. At stations where the train made stops the wicked conductor told the people on the platform that Sim Coy was a prisoner on his train, and pointed out the place of Morrison's confinement. A rush always followed and there was a scramble to get a peep at the noted criminal. At Lynn, where breakfast is taken by the trainmen and passengers, Morrison asked the privilege to satisfy a gnawing appetite, but was promptly refused. He finished his journey a prisoner in the water-closet.

Robbed While Intoxicated.

Special to tue Indianapolis Journal. NEW CASTLE, Nov. 22.-Chas. Bookout, of Losantville, came to this city yesterday on the early morning train. About 9 o'clock he went to the bank and cashed a check for $104, after which he started out to make the rounds of the saloons. About noon he and another party were seen going towards the O., L & W. depot in an advanced stage of intoxication. From the depot they went down the railroad into the switch-vards, where Bookout was afterwards seen lying in a beastly state of drunkenness. Later in the day he reported to the police that he had been robbed of $100 in money and a gold watch. He stated that he was given some whisky by his companion which he thinks was drugged. So far no clew has been found to the thief as the party was unknown to Bookout, and was not seen to be recognized by anyone else.

A Republican Who Gave Much Money to the Churches and Dined a Whole Town. Special to the Indianapolis Journal

BLOOMINGTON, Nov. 22 -One of the most enthusiastic Republicans in central Illinois is Joseph G. Moore, of Farmer City. He is famous in these parts for the very active part he took in two celebrated barbecues, one held at Belleflower in 1880 and attended by 15,000 people; the other at Farmer City, last September, and attended by 20,000 people. So joyous was he over the Republican national victory that he contributed $25 to each of the churches at Farmer City, and to-night, at Farmer City, he entertained his friends, Republicans and Democrats alike, from all parts with a sumptuous banquet which proved a very enthusiastic affair. It was one of the most notable political and social affairs that ever took place in these parts.

The Strange Case of Nellie Gilbert. Ottawa Special.

Miss Nellie Gilbert, daughter of H. H. Gilbert, the wealthy grain merchant, was last summer enrolled in the Boston Conservatory of Music, but on account of ill-health returned to her home in Utica, near this place, in September. On the evening of Oct. 22, while relating a story to her parents, she stopped suddenly and rambled off into unintelligible mutterings, and shortly fell into convulsions. She lingered between life and death for four weeks, utterly bereft of reason and partially unconscious. Every sound caused a renewal of the convulsions and ravings, and for weeks the little town refrained from outdoor demonstrations. On Monday evening last, at the same hour at which four weeks before she had been stricken with the strange malady, her reason returned, and taking up the thread of her story she finished it. She had not realized the lapse of time.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

Rev. Brooks's Independent Views on Colleges

Cause a Sensation. BUFFALO, Nov. 22.-Some members of the Church Congress must have been rather rudely shocked yesterday by the very vigorous protests of the Rev. Arthur Brooks of the Church of the Incarnation, New York, as he opened the discussion on papers read on the subject "The Relation of Colleges and Universities." Among others who had spoken and had regretted the lack of interest among churchmen in church educational institutions, were President Bodine. of Kenyon College, Gambier, O., and President Potter, of Hobart College, Geneva. The latter wondered at Episcopal men of wealth who gave to the nonsectarian colleges and forgot their own church institutions. But Mr. Brooks woke up the audience by saying that "the ideal college is one that is controlled by the church, but the colleges must be open to men who say daring things. It is better to have this kind of men inside than outside the college. The faculty should not tell a man that he must go out as soon as he begins to think. He did not like the idea of sectarian colleges, narrowed down to too fine a point. "If," said he, "the Episcopal church fences itself off you must expect the Presbyterians to do the same, and so on. I don't object to our boys going to other colleges. I believe the other churches have made such great successes of their colleges because those churches were less well organized than we. I believe in episcopacy as episcopacy, but not in running colleges." He vigorously attacked the close corporation idea; said he believed Harvard had turned out more Episcopal scholars than any other institution in the country, and made his audience laugh again by saying that many parents were absurdly afraid to send their sons to non-sectarian colleges for fear that they would catch something that would not agree with the purity of their Christian teachings. Mr. Brooks's speech grew in power as he spoke. and as he neared its close he denounced in strong terms the idea of endowing and building up small sectarian colleges at the expense of such magnificent institutions as the leading non-sectarian colleges of the country.

Funeral Ceremonies at Detroit-Memorial Address by Bishop Potter, of New York. DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 22 .- St. John's Church was thronged this evening on the occasion of the memorial service to the late Rt. Rev. Samuel Smith Harris, second bishop of Michigan. Occupying seats within the chancel were Bishop Potter and the Revs. Rufus W. Clarke, S. W. Detroit, and a number of visiting clergymen from the interior of the State. At the conclusion of the regular opening services the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., Bishop of New York, delivered the memorial address, taking as his text part of the second verse of First Samuel. chapter ix: "And there was not among the children a godier person than he; from his shoulders and upwards he was higher than any of the people." The distinguished divine said it was not his purpose to indulge in panegyric or eulogium upon the late Bishop of Michigan, knowing that he would be averse to any such remembrance of him, but simply to relate in a plain and homely manner some of the characteristics of a man whom the people of all localities where he had shed the light of Christian life had learned to love and venerate for his goodness of heart and sterling. unswerving integrity. He first met Bishop Harris in the House of Bishops, in New York, in 1880, a short time after his consecration, and remembered to have made a jocose remark at that time to the junior bishops, all of whom were exconfederate soldiers, that "I am afraid, gentlemen, I shall have to nail up a U.S. over this section of the house." "I shall never forget," said the speaker. "the lofty smile with which this pleasantry was greeted by Bishop Harris. It showed that he had enlisted under the cross of Christ, and henceforth through life his loyalty to that emblem could never be doubted."

Bishop Potter then adverted at some length to the school-boy career of the deceased as related by Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama, who was his schoolmate. As a lad at school, he said, he held himself apart from the ruder sports of the boys, but when necessity demanded could always hold his own. At the age of fifteen he entered the University at Alabama, and would have entered two years sooner had not his age debarred him under the rules. He graduated in three years, began the study of law in 1859, and was admitted to practice in 1860 by a | acknowledged that the man had taken the special act of the Legislature. The war com- satchel out of the office during the morning, and ing on, he entered the army as a staff officer. | an hour afterwards returned and claimed it had At the end of the war, which resulted in the destruction of his library and the impairment of his fortune, he removed to New York and began the practice of his profession.

The speaker then related the manner in which the subject of the service had entered upon the ministry, as related by Bishop Potter. "I was riding home in a street-car." said be, "thinking where good men, ordained of God, might be procured to fill the ranks of the clergy, when I noticed on the opposite seat a stranger whose very presence seemed to invite one's utmost confidence. When I left the car he followed and asked to be directed to the residence of Bishop Wilmer. I replied that I was the person. "I am Harris." said be; "you may remember me. I have come to offer myself to the service of the church." I was pleased beyoud expression, and licensed him at once to read in St. John's Church, Montgomery. He in due time passed the requirements and became rector of Trinity Church, New Orleans, and St. James's Church, Chicago. As his field of influence extended he seemed to grow in grace and knowledge, and became an ever increasing power for good. As Bishop of Michigan he attained his full spiritual stature. From his shoulders and upwards he was greater than any of the people.' He had a wonderful faculty of obtaining a knowledge of the personal needs of his people, and taking upon himself their burdens. His published lectures on the relations of the church and state were the product of a profound philosophic, logical and analytical mind, and have not received near the attention their merit entitles them to." The speaker closed by dwelling at some length on the remarkable yet peculiar [characteristics of Bishop Harris, so well known to all his acquaintances, which rendered his death so much of a personal loss to all his people.

THE MEAT QUESTION.

The Butchers and Rangemen Finally Succeed in Agreeing on a Plan of Action.

Sr. Louis, Nov. 22.-The long-deferred joint convention of the Range Association and butchers was held to-night in the Exposition building. The attendance was very light, not more than one hundred people being in the spacious entertainment hall. Col. Thos. Armour, chairman of the joint committee, presided. The report of the joint committee of the International Range Association and Butchers' National Protective Association was read by H. M. Taylor. of Denver. The report cites the dangers of combination and the concentration of markets of the country in the preamble, while the resolutions favor a combined effort on the part of butchers and cattlemen to secure such legislation as will restore the old condition of trade, so that instead of having only two markets for cattle in the country, there will be hundreds of points where brisk competition will inure to the benefit of the small dealer and the consumer. Col. Chas. James, president of the Butchers' National Association, addressed the convention at length, reciting the results of his investigations in various cities as to the workings of the dressed-beef combine. In Boston, he said, meat that could be bought in New York for 91 cents per pound was selling at 12 c. In St. Louis precisely the same cuts and quality of beef could be bought for 6 and 61 cents per pound. He explained this wide difference in prices by asserting that the dressed-beef men were at present engaged in wiping out St. Louis butchers and small dealers, and when they had accomplished this they would advance prices from 25 to 50 per cent. He said the present convention, or conference, had accomplished all that had been expected. It was simply an entering wedge in the great work to be done in the future. An address by C. C. Slaughter, of Texas, followed, after which Col. James O. Broadhead, of St. Louis, read a paper on the constitutionality of the State inspection laws.

Levi Samuels, of New York, and Brewster Cameron, of Arizona, made brief addresses. C. A. Ousley, representing the Texas Farmers' Alliance, read a paper on "The Growth of Trusts," and A. W. Hilliard, vice-president of the International Range Association, one on the "Meat Question." The result of the secret conferences held places the butchers and range men in favor of the passage of laws providing for the inspec-tion of cattle on the hoof only, at regular livestock yards, and the inspection of meat for export at the request of the exporter. A number of butchers are said to be disappointed at being muzzled in the convention on the question of diseased meat and cattle-inspection, and, it is asserted, will adopt resolutions on those points for presentation to the Senate investigating committee, now 12 session here.

Forcing Up the Price of Carpets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.-An advance in the price of carpets is one of the certainties of the coming season. What is in progress is done through a combination of manufacturers and is essentially a trust proceeding. The movement was initiated a fortnight ago when the Philadelphia manufacturers got together and agreed to increase the price of super ingrains for the spring season, 21c per yard. This was but a beginning. Following close upon that meeting correspondence ensued among manufacturars elsewhere, chiefly those who make domestic brussels carpets, and a meeting was appointed for yesterday in this city. The largest carpet interest in the country, including the great mills at Hartford and Lowell were represented at the meeting. Strict secrecy was enjoined in regard to the proceedings, but it was understood that the advance ordered at Philadelphia was doubled and the inference was left open that a still further advance, possibly trebling the Philadelphia figures, might be ordered before spring sales to the trade begin in January. This implies a probable advance to consumers of at least 10 conts per yard for all carpets above the grade of fair. The excuse of the manufacturers is that they have been running for two years without profit.

Important Capture of Thieves.

Sr. Louis, Nov. 22 .- A trio of thieves and an accessory, a woman, who have been operating quite extensively in St. Louis and vicinity, were placed behind the bars yesterday. The police have had great difficulty in locating their headquarters, but they succeeded, yesterday, in bagging their game. Detectives Connors and Mc Grath watched a house occupied by Clara Halland, the wife of "Skippy" Halland, now in the penitentiary for burglary. In a little while a man emerged from the premises, who was immediately placed under arrest, and on reaching the jail, put one hand in his pocket and pulled SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 2 out a sheet of paper which he tore to small bits, New York for Bremen.

and put something he had in his other hand in his mouth and swallowed it before the officers could prevent him. The scraps of paper were, after being put together, found to contain instructions how to blow open safes. The detectives returned to their post, and soon after Geo. McFadden, the accomplice of Prentice Tiller in the Pacific express robbery, walked up to the house and was arrested, and upon being searched eight watches were found stowed away in as many parts of his clothes. The third man was arrested a few hours after. His name is Leatherman, and he is a son-in-law of Mrs. Halland. The woman was taken in as an accomplice, and when her house was searched a Frisbie, J. H. We took the money, and in company with the man went to a bank, where we had the money changed into currency. We placed it in the satchel, which we locked, and by advice of the banker and Stoangh we shipped it by Wells Fargo express to Denver. On arriving here this morning my husband went to the express office, got the satchel, opened it, and found that it contained nothing but some brown paper and a few pieces of coal."
